

WELLNESS CHECKLIST

TIPS FOR RETURNING TO LIFE ON THE FARM

Welcome Back. While campus may look a little different than you once experienced or envisioned, we are here for you. This wellness checklist contains mental health and well-being resources to help you prepare logistically and emotionally as you transition to the Stanford campus.

CONNECT WITH FRIENDS, FAMILY, AND COMMUNITY

Set a regular time to connect with friends and family so that it doesn't get overlooked when life gets busy or hard. Find fellowship through Stanford's community centers and other campus communities so you don't hold everything on your own.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HEALTH

Reconnect or learn about Vaden Medical Services, CAPS, and Well-Being at Stanford. You may need to establish a new primary care physician or transfer your prescriptions.

ESTABLISH A DAILY ROUTINE

Include Health Check in your morning routine and identify times for your COVID-19 tests ahead of time. Stick to a schedule that feels comfortable to you.

BUILD A SELF-CARE MENU

What's in your self-care toolkit? Remind yourself what brings you joy and replenishes your soul. What support do you need from your community? How can you ask for and access it?

REST AND SELF-SOOTHE OFTEN

Make time for just yourself to recharge. Discover healthy ways to self-soothe. Nourish your body and stay hydrated. Get plenty of sleep.

CONNECT TO PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Connect with a professional if helpful, talk to a CAPS counselor or Well-Being Coach to assist with personal challenges and learn new strategies for adjusting back to campus.

MAKE SPACE FOR YOUR ANXIETIES AND FEARS

Take time to explore how you are feeling during this time of transition and uncertainty. Consider journaling, art work, or other forms of expression. Seek support by sharing with others.

ACCEPT WHERE YOU ARE RIGHT NOW

Be kind and gentle with yourself. Deprioritize productivity, lower expectations for what you "accomplish." We are not in normal times. It will not always be this challenging.

CHECK IN WITH YOURSELF

What do you need at the moment? Find a balance of connecting with others and time by yourself to reflect and recharge. Acknowledge that your feelings are valid.
